

They've lived inside so long that their faces
Collect dust like a ceiling fan
Dirt on top of black granite on top of steel
The darkness is unzipped by a pair of orange shorts
My eyes are glued to the screen
It is my comfort and my constant
Nothing has to change
And when she throws the hammer,
I will only become more entrenched